

A method for selling contingent information includes receiving an offer for the information with at least one contingency, providing the information in response to the offer, and then receiving a contingent payment if at least one condition for the contingency is satisfied after the information has been provided.